

THE PRE-CONVERSATION CHECKLIST

Every business is on a different point along the journey to sustainability and bringing nature into their thinking. Before starting a conversation with colleagues you might want to explore what your organisation is already doing and what more it could do by...

-  Seeing what initiatives, policies or practices already exist - places to start digging could include employee handbooks, business strategy documents, intranet pages, annual or impact reports
-  Watch one, or all, of the four Save Our Wild Isles business films to see what different sectors can do
-  Talk to your manager about where to start and how best to start this conversation in your business. You might want to draw upon the reasons why this matters for your organisation and how starting this conversation will support your personal development
-  Reaching out to your sustainability colleague/team if you have one to find out how in particular you are thinking about nature - using the 5 ways in above if helpful
-  Checking out our inspiration page for what other organisations are doing to bring nature into their business
-  Using what you find to start mapping your organisation's relationship with nature.

